Name of Commercial Interest	Nature of Relationship

All financial relationships with commercial interests must be disclosed. Common types of financial relationships include: employee, owner, contractor/consultant, director, trustee, advisory board member, stockholder, research support, royalties, and speaker.

Use of this information: A conflict of interest exists when an individual has a financial relationship with a commercial interest and the opportunity to affect CME content related to that commercial interest. The intent of disclosure is not to disqualify anyone from participating in an educational activity, but to resolve any conflicts of interest that may arise from financial relationships with commercial interests. The Kaiser Permanente National CME Program has a process to resolve any conflicts of interest before publication, and you may be asked for further information. Disclosure of your relevant financial relationships with commercial interests, including if you have nothing to disclose, will be made to the readers.
